Claudia Altman-Siegel opened the Altman Siegel Gallery on January 23rd, 2009. The gallery features a robust schedule of exhibitions by important emerging and established artists, punctuated and deepened by historical exhibitions. Its program focuses on internationally recognized, museum-level artists whose work contributes to the cultural dialogue domestically and abroad. The gallery discovers and presents significant Bay Area artists and brings internationally established artists to San Francisco for the first time.

In addition to its energetic exhibition program, Altman Siegel Gallery provides private advisory services to individuals establishing new collections, to those seeking to deepen mature collections, and to those seeking to resell significant works. The gallery is also available to serve as a liaison for individuals seeking to acquire or sell works at auction or on the domestic or international art markets.

Claudia Altman-Siegel is an independent curator, writer, and private dealer. She was formerly the senior director of Luhring Augustine, New York. Altman-Siegel has organized numerous museum and gallery exhibitions including Larry Clark's retrospective at the International Center for Photography, Christopher Wool's survey at the Musee d'art Moderne et Contemporain de Strasbourg, Rachel Whiteread's shows of new work at the Guggenheim and the Kunsthhaus Bregenz, Janet Cardiff's survey at PS 1 and numerous other exhibitions in Europe, Asia and South America. She sits on the board of the New Art Dealers Alliance and has served on the committee who selects galleries for the organization's Art Fair in Miami. She hopes to bring the best of the international art world to the Bay Area.
